This presentation will demonstrate how utilizing techniques and methods such as value stream mapping and change management can create a sustainable value delivery ecosystems.

Takeaways:

- Understand systems thinking and analytical thinking
- Learn how applying Lean to your value stream will increase the speed to value
- Learn techniques you can implement immediately in your project management
- Employ change management for sustainable value delivery

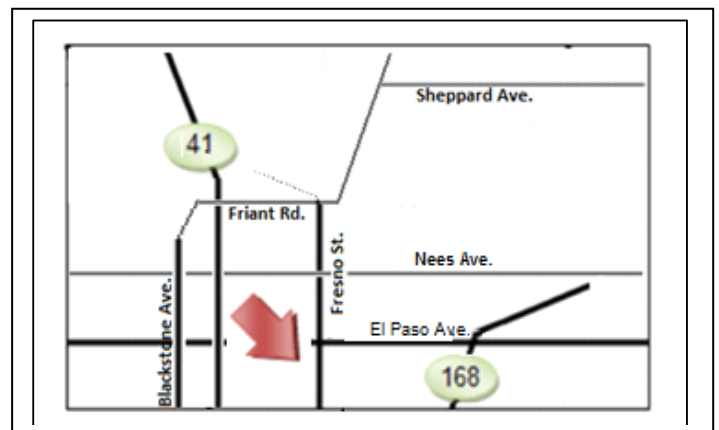

Bill Dominguez began his career in project management as a systems analyst for Mitchel Energy. The company wanted to implement a project management framework, and Bill volunteered to modify the framework to fit their needs. He found the field fascinating, and has been navigating its waters for over 37 years.

Bill works as a project management consultant in his own right, and also partners with Ecocentric Strategies and Valueinnova to increase business efficiency using Lean management and Agile.

Bill has a background in sales and marketing, as well as technology. As he puts it, "I have done the whole food chain." He was a principal with Quesix Software; pioneer electronic medical records in 1991.

As a consultant, Bill specializes in getting products to market, audits, and implementing Lean-Agile frameworks.
